Civiol Richard

Created by Richard Civiol

Revised 2015 by Alain Veylit

Revised 2020 by David Smith

Editorial Notes

This edition is a revised version of the Richard Civiol edition that was revised by Alan Veylit in 2015. The tablature has been verified using the facsimile contained in La Rhetorique des Dieux<sup>1</sup> by David J. Buch and La Rhetorique des Dieux facsimile<sup>2</sup> by Atelier Philador. Corrections from David J. Buch's La Rhetorique des Dieux were reviewed and generally used. The English translation comes from La Rhetorique des Dieux: A Critical Study of Text, Illustration, and Musical Style<sup>3</sup> by David J. Buch and have been used with permission.

The detailed corrections to the manuscript are located at the end of the associated piece.

The title of the pieces has the format of the original French followed by the English translation in parenthesis and then the form of the piece in brackets. The form of the piece is from La Rhetorique des Dieux<sup>4</sup> by David J. Buch.

FOR UNDERSTANDING THE BOOK
THE RHETORIC OF THE GODS

Although the majority of those curious individuals wishing to understand this book have only to consult its contents with the eyes of the body and of the mind, nevertheless, to relieve those who do not wish to make the effort, they will know that the principal purpose of the person who wished to give it form has been to make a collection of the most beautiful lute pieces of the Illustrious Denis Gaultier. Those who know music well will find complete satisfaction in it in that this author expresses himself with so much art, so much skill, and in such choice terms, that of all of the parts of the body, he attracts the soul to the ear, and that he represents very perfectly the nature of the passions and raises the most depressed spirits to the most sublime virtues. This manner of expression may rightfully be called The Rhetoric of the Gods, inasmuch as human understanding is unable to conceive of a more eloquent language. As for the rest of what one sees in this book, they are decorations executed by the more famous artists of the century, of which a brief description follows.

By Master Baslin, Goldsmith, are

The ornaments on the cover of this book, consisting of two initials, framed by each one of the four parts of music, the caducei in the corners, and the lyres of Apollo, with which the book is closed.

By Master Ferrier

The inside corner engravings.

By Master Bosse

The first drawing, where one finds represented an altar upon which is placed a lute crowned with three wreaths, one of laurel, the next of myrtle, and the last of olive, with this verse above: Arbiter of Love, Peace, and War.

By Master Nanteuil, are

The portraits of Anne de Chambré and of damsel Genevieve Benoist, his wife.

By Master Eustache le Sueur is the drawing that follows, executed by Master Nantuil, in which are represented

By the same master, a drawing serving as the title and the beginning of this book, executed by Master Bosse, in which one finds represented

Three figures, in Heaven, under a zodiac: one representing Music, the other Harmony, and the last Eloquence. The first is holding an unrolled scroll upon which are inscribed the words The Rhetoric of the Gods, and near which is a mysterious prelude that has neither beginning nor end. The second figure, crowned as Queen of Heaven, holds a lute on which she plays this prelude. The third is crowned with pearls and diamonds. This arrangement announces that these divinities together make up the science of the great Gaultier.

All this is followed by twelve drawings by Master Bosse, executed by himself, that represent the twelve modes whose names are: Dorian or Doric, Hypodorian, Phrygian, Hypoprygian, Lydian, Hypolydian, Mixolydian, Hypomixolydian, Aolian, Hypoaolian Ionian, and Hypionian. As each of these modes has the property of exciting certain passions and is appropriate to certain melodies, the artist has represented in each drawing the actions that the mode incites, the most suitable ancient and modern instruments, and he has even taken care to include the architecture conforming to these modes. In each of these drawings is above all a lute, with an open book in which the mode is notated.

The explanation of the pieces that follow these modes will be incomparably better understood by the pieces themselves than by the little discourse that is found beneath each piece, which is solely for the understanding of those who do not have a complete knowledge of music.

By the same Bosse, is

At the end of the book, a little Mars holding a sword in one hand and a writing pen in the other, seated on a carpet where the coat of arms of Master de Chambré is laid out in perspective.

By Master Belluchau are

The drawing of the initials, and the writings that are below each piece.

By Master Damoiselet is

This writing and the table of contents found at the end of the book.

Gauquelin

Rethorique des Dieux [Prelude]

Handwritten musical score for 'Rethorique des Dieux [Prelude]'. The score is written on two systems of three staves each. The first system contains six measures, and the second system contains six measures, starting with a measure number '7' on the left. The notation includes various rhythmic values (quarter, eighth, and sixteenth notes), rests, and dynamic markings such as 'a' (accendo) and 'f' (forte). The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat dots.

By this celestial discourse the Illustrious Gaultier expresses very perfectly his gratitude towards the gods for the knowledge with which they have endowed him, and with all possible respect, he dedicates to them both his person and his works.

Phaëton foudroyé

(Phaëthon Struck Down) [Allemande]

Handwritten musical score for the piece "Phaëton foudroyé" (Phaëthon Struck Down) [Allemande]. The score is written on a grand staff (treble and bass clefs) and includes rhythmic notation (notes, rests, bar lines) and figured bass notation (letters like 'a', 'r', '6', 'f', 'd' and symbols like '||a', '6/a', '6/a'). The score is divided into measures, with measure numbers 1, 5, 9, 13, and 17 indicated on the left side. The notation includes various rhythmic values such as quarter notes, eighth notes, and sixteenth notes, as well as rests and bar lines. The figured bass notation is placed below the notes, often with a double slash (||) indicating a specific fingering or articulation. The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat dots at the end of the final measure.

This piece bears witness to the fact that Phaeton, by his imprudence and ambition, was the cause of the burning up of half of humanity, to the punishment that Jupiter meted out to this rash person, and to the pain that Apollo, his father, suffered at his loss.

Le Panegirique

This eulogy in praise of Mercury expresses perfectly the eloquence that this god puts to use when he makes his speeches and informs his pupils that the arts are indebted to him for their birth.

Notes

Measure 5 first note change from Crotchet to dotted crotchet to make correct beats in measure and match voice rhythms and strong beat on chord.

Measure 13 the facsimile shows a quaver on the 4th to the last note and a semiquaver over the last two notes. This makes too many beats in the measure. Solution is to ignore quaver and keep a semiquaver for the last 5 notes.

Measure 19 the facsimile shows the first six notes as a crotchet with the last two as a semiquaver. This is the wrong number of beats. Solution is to make notes 2 through 6 a quaver.

Minerve

(Minerva) [Courante]

Handwritten musical score for Minerva (Minerva) [Courante]. The score is written on a grand staff (treble and bass clefs) and includes a vocal line with lyrics. The piece is in 3/4 time and consists of 24 measures. The notation includes various rhythmic values (quarter, eighth, sixteenth notes), rests, and dynamic markings such as f (forte) and a (accents). The score is divided into four systems, with measure numbers 7, 15, and 22 indicated on the left. The final measure (24) ends with a repeat sign and a double bar line.

The image shows a musical score for guitar, consisting of four systems of two staves each. The notes are written in a shorthand notation where letters (a, r, d, f) represent fingerings or specific notes. Measure numbers 1, 3, 5, and 7 are indicated at the start of their respective systems. The notation includes various symbols such as slurs, accents, and dynamic markings like 'f'.

The image shows a musical score for a piece titled "[Allemande or Gigue]" on page 33. The score is written for a single melodic line on a five-line staff. It consists of 16 measures, grouped into four systems of four measures each. The notation includes various rhythmic values (quarter, eighth, and sixteenth notes), rests, and accidentals (sharps, flats, naturals). Above the staff, there are several slurs and dynamic markings such as f and ff. Below the staff, there are some numbers (4, 6) and a double bar line with a slash. The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat dots at the end of the 16th measure.

Note

In the facsimile measure 8 the last note is an c on the 4th string (the note g) and it is changed here to an e (note a) so if fits in the chord.

(Circe) [Pavanne]

The musical score is presented in a single system with six staves. Above the staves, rhythmic notation is provided for each measure, consisting of stems and flags. The notes themselves are represented by letters: 'a' for the first string, 'b' for the second, 'c' for the third, 'd' for the fourth, 'e' for the fifth, and 'f' for the sixth. The score is divided into measures by vertical bar lines. Measure numbers 6, 10, 14, 19, and 24 are indicated on the left side of the staves. The notation includes various dynamics such as f (forte) and ff (fortissimo), and articulation marks like slurs and accents. The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat dots at the end of the sixth staff.

Circe, having once upon a time planned to enchant all who might want to reach her island, held with the sirens several famous concerts of which history tells the great effects that followed. The notes, having been preserved by Harmony, have since been deposited by her in the hands of true Gaultier in order that these marvels may be made known. This is what can be heard in this piece, which contains the pure substance of the beautiful works of Circe.

Note

In the facsimile there is a c on the fifth string (e) on the next to last beat that is changed to a c on the fourth string (g).

Cephale

(Cephalus) [Courante]

The musical score is written for a single melodic line on a five-line staff. It consists of 32 measures, divided into four systems of eight measures each. The notation includes various rhythmic values (quarter, eighth, and sixteenth notes), rests, and dynamic markings such as f (forte) and ff (fortissimo). The lyrics are written in a stylized, handwritten font below the notes. The score begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat dots.

Cephalus mourns the loss of his dear Procris, of which he is the innocent cause, and accuses the gods of injustice, abandoning himself to tears in such a way that his eyes become fountains.

(The Heroic Man) [Allemande]

The musical score is written for a single melodic line on a five-line staff. It begins with a treble clef and a common time signature. The piece is in G major, indicated by one sharp (F#). The notation includes various rhythmic values such as quarter, eighth, and sixteenth notes, as well as rests. Dynamic markings like f (forte) and ff (fortissimo) are used throughout. There are also performance instructions such as tr (trill) and acc (accents). The score is divided into measures, with measure numbers 4, 8, 13, and 17 clearly marked on the left side. The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat dots.

This discourse that the gods communicate to mortals by the ministry of Gaultier their orator, informs them that whoever wants to possess the quality of magnanimity or generosity must seek wisdom, must surpass all others in virtue, must expose himself courageously to great perils for just and reasonable goals, and must value life in order to do noble deeds. But he must nevertheless not fear death, he must scorn pleasures, never complain when he is deprived of the goods of fortune, love his friends faithfully, not recall the injuries that are done to him, love his enemies and hate their vices, openly declare his sentiments, not speak very much of men either in praise or in blame, and in dividing things up he must not claim all that belongs to him. If someone does good to him he must do more in return; he must not hold the wicked in esteem nor fear their power, and he must humble himself before worthy people.

[Courante]

The musical score is written for a single melodic line, likely for a lute or similar instrument, as indicated by the six-line staff. The notation is a form of musical shorthand, possibly a tablature or a simplified notation system, using letters (a, b, r) and symbols (accents, mordents, mordent-like symbols) to represent notes and ornaments. The piece is in 3/4 time, as indicated by the 'C' time signature. The score is divided into five systems, with measure numbers 6, 14, and 21 marked at the beginning of the second, third, and fourth systems respectively. The notation includes various rhythmic values and ornaments, such as accents, mordents, and mordent-like symbols. The piece concludes with a repeat sign at the end of the fifth system.

The image shows a musical score for a prelude, consisting of four staves of music. The notation includes various notes, rests, and dynamic markings. The first staff begins with a dynamic marking of  $p$ . The second staff starts with a measure number of 3 and includes a dynamic marking of  $p$ . The third staff starts with a measure number of 6 and includes a dynamic marking of  $p$ . The fourth staff starts with a measure number of 7 and includes dynamic markings of  $p$  and  $f$ . The score concludes with a double bar line and repeat signs. The notation is written in a style that uses letters 'a' and 'r' for notes, and symbols like 'f' and 'p' for dynamics. There are also some symbols that look like 'h' and 'h' in the fourth staff.

Note

This Prelude was the first piece in Sous Aeolien (before l'Héroïque) but is not in G Minor. It is A Minor and fits better here.

Orphée

(Orpheus) [Allemande or Gigue]

The musical score is written on a grand staff with two systems of two staves each. The notation includes various rhythmic values (quarter, eighth, sixteenth notes) and rests, along with dynamic markings such as f (forte) and h (hairpins). The score is divided into measures, with measure numbers 4, 8, 12, and 16 indicated on the left. The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat dots.

Here Gaultier has Orpheus complain that his Euridice has passed into the realm of the dead. And going beyond what history teaches us about this illustrious grieved person, Gaultier attracts to himself all of Nature, confessing that she is touched deeply by all the sorrow of Orpheus.

Note

In the facsimile the last two notes are both quavers but the measure has too many beats. They are replaced with semi-quavers.

[Allemande or Gigue]

The musical score consists of five systems of music, each with a five-line staff. Above the staves are rhythmic patterns and notes represented by letters 'r', 'a', and 'd'. The notes are often accompanied by accents (p) and dynamic markings (f). The score is divided into measures, with some measures containing repeat signs (//a). The systems are numbered 5, 8, 11, and 15 on the left side.

The nymph Echo, rightfully punished on account of the chatter with which she had often deceived Juno, and mistreated by Love, who had incited passion in her for an ungrateful lover, is reduced to hiding in caves and to being unable to complain of the sorrows that afflict her. All she has left is the limited power of uttering the last words of those who tell their sufferings to the rocks and the forests.

(The Murderess) [Courante]

The musical score is written on a grand staff with treble and bass clefs. It consists of four systems of music, each with a measure number on the left (1, 8, 14, 21). The notation includes various rhythmic values (quarter, eighth, and sixteenth notes) and rests. The lyrics 'a', 'r', and 'a' are placed below the notes. The score includes repeat signs (double bar lines with dots) and first/second endings (slashes with 'a' below). The first system (measures 1-7) ends with a repeat sign. The second system (measures 8-13) includes a first ending (measures 8-10) and a second ending (measures 11-13). The third system (measures 14-20) includes a first ending (measures 14-16) and a second ending (measures 17-20). The fourth system (measures 21-27) includes a first ending (measures 21-23) and a second ending (measures 24-27).

[Sarabande]

Musical score for Sarabande, measures 1-18. The score is written on a grand staff (treble and bass clefs) with a 3/4 time signature. The melody is in the treble clef, and the accompaniment is in the bass clef. The piece features a variety of rhythmic patterns, including eighth and sixteenth notes, and rests. Dynamic markings include f (forte) and ff (fortissimo). The score is divided into three systems, with measure numbers 8 and 16 indicated on the left. The first system (measures 1-7) includes a double bar line with a repeat sign and a fermata. The second system (measures 8-15) includes a double bar line with a repeat sign, a fermata, and a 4-measure rest. The third system (measures 16-18) includes a double bar line with a repeat sign and a fermata.

Here an innocent troupe of shepherds and shepherdesses, singing and dancing in the shade of a young elm, are disturbed by a famished wolf who is stealing one of their lambs. But by running after him they make him leave his prey, and then continue their rejoicings.

(Narcissus)

Musical score for Narcisse (Narcissus). The score consists of five systems of music. Each system includes a vocal line with notes and rests, and a lute line with tablature. The tablature uses letters 'a', 'r', and 'd' on a six-line staff. The first system starts with a 6-measure rest in the lute line. The second system has a 4-measure rest. The third system has a 6-measure rest. The fourth system has a 6-measure rest. The fifth system has a 6-measure rest. The score ends with a double bar line and repeat dots.

Narcissus, seeing himself in the crystal liquid of a fountain that nature had decorated with the most beautiful flowers of spring, was so smitten with his own beauty that the fire of his love dried up on the edge of this fatal water, while he complained of being unable to possess himself.

Juno, having learned about Jupiter's love affairs, entered into such a rage with such violent fits that with the mere stamping of her feet she shook the entire celestial machine. Harmony, which results from the movements of this great body, was interrupted. She changed herself during this action in the manner that the preceding piece faithfully demonstrates.

Handwritten musical score for Sarabande, page 83, measures 1 through 32. The score is written in a single system with a treble clef and a 3/4 time signature. It consists of a single melodic line with various notes and rests, and a bass line with notes and rests. The notation includes slurs, accents, and dynamic markings such as φ, h, f, and ff. Measure numbers 8, 16, 23, and 30 are indicated on the left side of the score. The piece concludes with a double bar line and repeat signs.

(Tombeau of Mr de Lenclos) [Allemande]

By the command of Apollo, the learned virgins gather on the sacred mountain in order to erect the tomb of Lenclos. One of the favorites of this god holds council among them as to which material to use and in which form they must build it. Finally, they make a resolution: they have a great yew tree cut down that for two hundred years had drawn its nourishment from a cemetery in which it made its residence. They make a lute from it to serve as his monument, and in this gloomy wood they put his ashes to rest. But as they recognize that their science is not great enough nor lofty enough to pronounce his funeral oration, they skillfully put this tombeau into the hands of the great Gaultier, the best friend of the deceased and the only one capable of rendering this final office. Having this trust, this divine man draws from it, through the power of his art, words that express so strongly the grief of this loss, that all his listeners take on the nature of this passion.
